HARTFORD.

"Where is old Hartford that good old town I used to know?"

Why, situated on the banks ofough where she has always been. And seems to me that one who was never a gals-out, as old dimes on a Sunday, and behaved herself in a able. And why? I must admit the truthfulness of the accusation that the new school building has better accommodations, better ventilation and smaller and cheaper in every way. "The little low, two-story brick school," but further in that I cannot
